Dear Sasha,

I believe that companies in UA would benefit from starting to market their companies to investors NOW.

Investors like to take time to get to know the principals, the business model and the operations,

A proactive marketing campaign might be extremely beneficial when the situation in UA stabilizes and investors return to the country.

As you can imagine, at that time, there might be a lot of investment opportunities, and a lot of companies looking to raise capital.

It make sense that the companies that start today to nature a relationship with investors will have a competitive advantage.

Could you please identify companies who might benefit from a proactive marketing approach and discuss the idea with them to determine if a call between them and us is warranted.

Please let me know if you have any questions or if any company would like to explore further.

Regards,
